THE ATTENDANCE IS VERY MEAGRE

FEW AVAIL THEMSELVES OF THE OPPORTUNITY TO HEAR EXCELLENT TALKS.

MEETING IS INTERESTING

Lack of Interest in the Public Health Session of the Medical Society is Most Disappointing.

In a hall capable of seating five hundred, but a meagre representation of Janesville's citizens met last evening to hear a most interesting discussion by able speakers on the question of public health. A meeting of the members of the society had been held in the afternoon which proved most interesting but it was thought the evening session would attract many laymen. Despite the small number present the program arranged was carried out in full, excepting the abysmal of Dr. Ravenel's illustrated slides. The electric equipment of the city hall had become short-circuited, preventing their presentation.

Among the doctors who were in attendance at the sessions were: E. H. Brown, Beloit; J. W. Kiehle, Oxfordville; G. S. Darley, Brothford; F. H. King, Darlington; F. L. Noy, Beloit; D. A. Chittenden, Stoughton; A. C. Munns, Beloit; H. O. Delaney, Beloit; M. L. Ewing, Evansville; E. B. Holm, and F. A. Thayer, Beloit; and Bennett and Council of the same place; Noyor, Stoughton; Jackson and Sheldon, Madison.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Rock County and Wisconsin Central Medical Societies, representing the Third Councilor District, and it had been purposed to disseminate knowledge upon the subjects of tuberculosis and Preventive Medicine to the people at large.

All were to have been invited to participate in the discussion following upon the professional address, but, despite the unexceptionable weather, not as many as twenty-five laymen were present.

At six o'clock in the Grand hotel there had been a dinner to mark the sessions of the joint societies, and all the topics premised upon the program were omitted through lack of time during the interval between the banqueting and the evening session, which latter occurred at 7:30. It is announced that the next joint meeting of these organizations, which will take place before next Fall, will be more successful in arrangement and in attraction to the public.

The introductory remarks of the evening session were made by Dr. Julius Noer, "Aesculapius," he said, "was the father of medicine, and I incurred the enmity of Pluto therefor, who entered a complaint with Jupiter, and the father of all the gods sent thunderbolts to destroy the original genius who was of so much benefit to mankind. But though Aesculapius was thus killed, his followers are living to this day, and are combating disease valiantly."

"When told this story of the Greek physician, Inhabitants remarked that modern doctors have long since ceased to perform wonders. But by 'wonders' he meant miracles. We moderns are performing wonders in driving from the face of the earth all infections."

Dr. C. A. Harper of Madison, secretary of the State Board of Health, was the next speaker:

"Should I come to Janesville to put its merchants out of business or to tell you ways in which you could do so, I wouldn't feel safe in doing, but it is to put its diseases out of business that I am here. Pasteur has made the statement that it is within the power of Man to drive all germs-diseases from the globe.

"A primary requisite to do this is to dope yourself with patent medicines and then consult physicians for your aggravated ailment. If the average citizen spent his money in learning how to avoid disease instead of in the purchase of dope after the disease has come, the object of sanitarians would be attained. In this world last century the total number of men killed on the field of battle was fourteen millions. And the total number slain by disease was thirty millions."

"Everybody in this country would be in arms should a war menace it, but they are supine in the presence of disease, which is far more insidious than war. In the eighteenth century in Europe sixty millions of people died of the smallpox. That was before vaccination was discovered. Scarcely an individual escaped the malady if he lived to be as old as thirty years, and one out of every ten died of it."

"It is now proposed by Christian Scientists to abandon vaccination, but if it were so done, the old form of the malady would return to our midst, and we should be vulnerable. Vaccination, say some, is a theory created by the medical profession to line its pockets. Those who say that do not stop to think how much more money we could make from a single case of smallpox than from a dozen vaccinations."

"In 1870 the death rate in this country was 30 per cent; today it is 10 per cent. This indicates the progress of science. As for the state of Wisconsin, the death rate here is now only 12-20 per cent. But tuberculosis statistics are at present appalling."

"Dr. S. L. S. says 1,400,000 deaths are caused annually in the United States by the White Plague and one-fourth of the remaining population is infected by it. Why is this, when the negro slave on the plantations of Dixieland was always protected against it? He never had it."

"The sanitary conditions in the United States are abominable. During the Spanish-American war a commission was sent down into the camps from New York city to investigate and declared that the sanitary measures in force were parallel to those of Pekin and not as efficient as those of the Patagonians. Fourteen men in that war died of disease for every one killed by a bullet."

"At present the army sanitary regime is no better than that prevalent during the civil war, when there wasn't any germ talk. And in the universities and colleges of this country absolutely nothing is being done towards telling the students how to guard against germ evils."

U. G. WAITE WRITES GAZETTE FROM TEXAS

Tales of His Travels in Lone Star State—Speaks of Climate and Soil.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 23, 1909.—

What a mighty state Texas is! Do you know, don't render, that I started from San Antonio yesterday morning, rode all day and all night on an express train and reached this city a few hours after daybreak this morning?

Yes, you say, but that is not so great; there are other states you can ride all day and all night in.

Very true, but just remember that I had already ridden all of one night and well into the next morning in getting from the Texas east line into San Antonio.

How I wish I might have had a handsome Englishman on the train with me the past three days... I would have had this to say to him: "See here, Johnny Ball, we are now in the great state of Texas; a state which would, if flopped over onto your bloomin' little islands, cover them effectually from view and then have room enough left around the edges to slip under a job lot of European nations like Portugal, and Holland and Belgium, and Denmark, and Switzerland, with room to rent at that."

One feels like letting the eagle scream down here, where the sweep of empire is so majestic. It takes nearly an hour after the rising sun to cross the eastern border of Texas before the whole state has been kissed. And as far as the major portion of the land through which we passed is concerned, it don't make a bit of difference whether the sun ever kisses it again or not, unless there can be some arrangement made for a general dousing with water and then keep dousing good and plenty between the hours.

As one woman (from the north) remarked on the train yesterday: "The earth is only one-fourth land to three-fourth water. Why did the Creator make so much of that land poor?" One almost wonders why, after riding through miles after miles of swamps in Louisiana and of desert in Texas.

And yet this same desert blossoms like the rose when water can be turned on it. When one stops to consider just how long the Spaniards and their descendants have been inhabiting this country out here and then remember how little they have ever done toward improving it, the utter shiftlessness of that people amazes and disgusts me. The haughty sons of Spain were here long enough ago to have built reservoirs and aqueducts and got water on all this land that needs it so much and that responds so quickly when watered.

I was over across the Rio Grande in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, to-day, and saw a church that was founded before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth rock, so you see this is not a new section of country by any means. All it needs is Uncle Sam's reclamation bureau after it and then things will come to pass.

Mr. Tippet led the discussion that followed Dr. Ravenel's address.

"That an ounce of prevention," said Mr. Tippet, "is worth a pound of cure is an old, old aphorism. Let us profit by it."

"Seven years ago Napoleon Bonaparte, who was a mere butcher, was selected by the French nation as its greatest man. But the other day, Pasteur was selected by a subsequent vote and that's an indication of the progress of science in this age.

"As for Janesville, many germs are carried into homes here by housemaids and fathers who frequent saloons, which we could get rid of every dangerous saloon in this town."

Next to speak was Dr. L. F. Bennett of Beloit. His words were as follows:

"The thousands of men, women and children who violate the laws of hygiene with respect to ventilation are not represented here tonight. In very large numbers, but it is as well to mention that these laws should be propagated as well as rules that guard against elevator, staircase and fire-escape accidents.

"Pulmonary air is a potent source of tuberculosis and kindred disease!

The problem of ventilation would not be thrust upon our school-buildings if we lived in an ideal climate. In that case we'd have an abundance of fresh air free from dust—we'd live out of doors. Neither would we be confronted by this problem if the little red schoolhouse was still the scene of our educational activities.

"For the children nurtured by little red schoolhouses had red blood and withstand any possible bad sanitary conditions by their early-day exposure. If they did not have enough ventilation they were given to whitening holes in the walls. We are the pioneers of the ventilation problem in schools. It is well that an $18,000 plant, regulating the change of air every five minutes automatically, has been installed in Beloit high school, and other cities should profit by Bell's example."

Dr. Charles S. Sheldon of Madison was the concluding speaker of the evening, and his remarks were as follows: "The apathy in regard to public health on the part of the public itself is unacceptable. This country is full of secretaries of war and the navy large sums of money to defray the expense of killing men of foreign nations. Why should there not be a secretary of public health in the president's cabinet?"

"The gentlemen present here tonight hold meetings three or four times within the course of a year and propose to invite the public upon every future occasion. Why the public has not flocked here this evening is absolutely inexplicable. I hope that all who did come will constitute themselves emissaries to go forth and rally a future audience that will pack this hall chock-full of people with a realizing sense of the importance of our cause. Let them awake from their lethargy!"

"In 1870 the death rate in this country was 30 per cent; today it is 10 per cent. This indicates the progress of science. As for the state of Wisconsin, the death rate here is now only 12-20 per cent. But tuberculosis statistics are at present appalling."

ECZEMA CURABLE? PROVEN!

Attorney at Moline, Ill., Convinced by Oil of Wintergreen Compound.

There is nothing that will convince a lawyer except evidence.

Now, here is some rather startling evidence of a simple home cure for eczema which convinced one lawyer, E. C. Entlein, attorney at Moline, Ill. He tells how all of wintergreen compound, mixed with thymol and glycerine, as in D. D. D. Prescription, cured him in thirty days after thirty-two years of suffering.

"For 32 years," writes Attorney Entlein, "I was troubled with eczema, scabs all over my face, body and head, I could run a hair brush over my body and the door would be covered with scales enough to fill a hatbox. I tried everything—salves, internal medicine, X-ray—all without result."

"Just a month ago I was induced to try D. D. D. Prescription. The itch was relieved instantly; so I continued. It is just a month now and I am completely cured. I have not a particle of itch and the scales have dropped off.

"I can only say again CURE DISCOVERED. I am now starting all eczema sufferers on the right track."

Care after cure has been brought to my attention and always that instant relief from the awful itch.

CASE AGAINST BANK WAS TRANSFERRED

Trustee of Insolvent Man's Estate Secures Change of Venue from La Crosse to Dane County.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 28.—The case of Sidney H. Sturz, trustee of the estate of Ralph B. Luckey, bankrupt, against the Farmers' Bank of Cuba City, now the State Bank of Cuba City, has been transferred from this court to Dane county, plaintiff having asked for a change of venue.

The suit was brought in an effort to recover $8,000 alleged to have been paid by the bankrupt to the bank in question after Mr. Luckey's financial affairs were in an insolvent condition, and distribute it among the creditors.

The case which was tried here a year ago was appealed to the supreme court, which ordered the judgment of the circuit court of La Crosse reversed with directions to order a new trial.

Charles Reynolds, who was charged with writing threatening letters and who claimed he is being persecuted by the police, has been adjudged insane.

Joe Flynn, alias John Flynn, alias John White, was arrested just as he was about to board a train for Minneapolis, charged with grand larceny.

Flynn is wanted at Barbados, where he is charged with stealing $15.

Flynn admitted the crime.

HONEYMOON TRAIL" SCORED A BIG HIT

Large Audience Pleased with Clever Comedy and Tuneful Lyrics Unfolded by Splendid Company.

With its book of gaily-tinted, colorful, sprightly dances, capers and comedy sing-songs, and magnificently array of costumes, "Honeymoon Trail" wades its way through that pleasant country where the cares that infest the day fold up their tents like Arabs.

There isn't a dull moment from the advent of Harry Stone in the role of the "Little Bee" man to the final curtain-fall, and Stone fits the part like a glove. It is difficult to conceive of Cecil Leon or any other predecessor extracting more fun from the character of Dennis Mason, another character ably delineated by W. H. St. James, or the sanctimonious old fraud, "Dr. Van Whistle" (played by Charles Burrow), or the wheezy old patient with the "rhommaties," or Hartense Brown's "Neville Old Lady" or the rest, even the divorce colony, and the numerous other folly for "Perkins" advertising dodos, goldbrick schemes, and rip-on-upheavals machinations.

This gifted actor made a hit here some years ago in the role of a reporter in "The Stolen Story."

Little Fox is more alluring than the average musical comedy hero's sweetheart and never overacts, not even in the refreshing little sketch "I Don't Want a Million Dollars." Anna Youlin, who has been seen and heard here at least three times in recent years gives a splendid account of herself in "Honeymoon Trail," the song-bird of the piece and the amiable little swing-ballad silt, "One Little Boy Had Money." Olive Vail, and the "rollers" also "please it."

PAINLESS DENTISTRY

A Deloit party dropped in the other day, and on leaving the office, he said, "Dr. Richards, I came all the way from Deloit to try you. I've heard of your painless work, and thought that if there was anybody that could save me from so much suffering, I was going to see him at once."

"Well," said I, "How is it? Are you satisfied with my work?"

"Entirely," said he, "You have not hurt me at all, and I thank you heartily for your carefulness."

So it goes almost every day. I never was able to do away with as much of the pain of Dentistry as I am now doing continually.

ROBERT W. M'LEAN'S LIFE JOURNEY ENDED

Passed Away Last Evening at Chihuahua, Mexico—Sad News for Hundreds of Friends in This City.

Sad tidings were received here at approximately one hour this morning of the death, at Chihuahua, Mexico, at 8:15 last evening, of Robert Walker McLean—for many years one of the most active and public spirited of Janesville's younger business men and widely known and well remembered by the affectionate title of "Bob." He had been on crutches with rheumatism for some time past and this was probably the immediate cause of his death.

"Bob" McLean was a member of the old Janesville Guards and a Lieutenant of the company in the days when it was considered one of the crack military organizations of the northwest. For several years he served as school commissioner from the Fourth ward and a member of the board at the time the new high school building was erected, was instrumental in securing the manual training department and laboratories which were in that day considered by some as questionable innovations. He was a charter member of Janesville Lodge No. 254, B. P. O. E., and his name was also on the rosters of Western Star Lodge No. 14, F. & A. M., Janesville Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar, and Oriental Lodge No. 22, Knights of Pythias. In the Rock County Calumetian society, also, he was an energetic and enthusiastic worker and many other organizations and undertakings knew and appreciated his tireless effort.

Of the family of McLean boys who have taken such an important part in the life of this community, he is the first to go. Born in Andover, Mass., in 1861, he came to Janesville with his father, George C. McLean and family in January, 1870. He was married in 1882 to Mrs. Luella King, daughter of Mrs. Thomas King of this city, and the wife and two daughters, the Misses Flora and Roberta McLean, survive him. The two brothers are George C. and Colin Campbell of this city, James B. of Los Angeles, Cal., Fred C. of Rockford, and Charles P. McLean of Sioux City, Ia.

In 1891 Mr. McLean's sufferings with asthma became so intense that it became necessary for him to seek a permanent abode in a new climate, and the pharmacy which he had conducted at the corner of Jackson and Milwaukee streets was sold to George E. King. He spent a year and a half in El Paso, Texas, and thereafter went to Chihuahua, Mexico, where he purchased the hotel which he had since conducted.

It is understood that under the laws of Mexico, remains of the departed must be buried within the borders of the republic and may not be removed until at least three years have elapsed. If this is true it will not be possible for the family and relatives to bring the body northward and hold the funeral here.

THEATRE

"The Power of Truth" during his career. There are no less than twenty-three entirely original musical numbers to be heard in "The Power of Truth" that's part of the story, a story in which is recorded the soul throbs and heartbeats of an American girl who, from the tip of her shoes to the crest of her pompadour is filled with real human interest; the kind that no long life lasts and men and women live with calm sympathy and approval. You couldn't desert her, because she needs your help, and although the lights of life are gone, chivalry still lives. This is simply the situation at the opening of the play, the complications which follow, the plots and counterplots which arise there from being too many to explain clearly. Like all plays of this nature it does not depend upon scenery and sensational effects for success, but upon good acting and real merit and it has both in abundance; an exceptionally strong acting company—a splendid production and a good play. Mr. Lorin J. Howard and his excellent company of players will appear in "The Power of Truth" at the Myers theatre Friday, Jan. 29.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Rate McLauren, niece of the late Senator McLauren of Mississippi, plays with Robt. Edison in "The Call of the North."

Antique bronze frames containing autographed photographs of Billie Burke were distributed as souvenirs of the 15th performance of "Love Watchers" in New York.

The two leading women with Richard Carle in "Mary's Lamb" were born in Iowa; Miss Cecilia Rhoda in Davenport, and Mrs. Nellie May Brewster in the small town of Crosson.

William Faversham opened at Daly's New York, last Friday, with Edward Childs Carpenter's play, "The Barber of New Orleans," his second production of the season.

There were two successful openings in New York on Monday last; Eleanor Italiano produced "The Dawn of Tomorrow" at the Lyceum, and Julia Sanderson presented "Kitty Gray" at the New Amsterdam.

Frankel Wilson, blind, is of the opinion that his part in "When Knights Were Bold," which he is presenting for a second season, is the best suited role he has ever played

Nearly twenty arrests were made in the raid, and the campaign will be continued until all obey the law, say the officials of the association.

Satan & Sanderson

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES,
Author of "Hearts Courageous," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1908, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

Chapter 12

If the man who had been the subject of the observations Jessie had heard had been less absorbed in his walkings leisurely along on the opposite side of the street he would have noticed the look of distaste in the eyes of those he passed. They drew away from him, and one spoke—to no one in particular and with an oath offensive and forcible. But weather beaten, tanned, indifferently clad and with a small brown dog following him, the newcomer passed along, oblivious to the sledging scrutiny. He did not stare about him after the manner of a stranger, though so far as he knew he had never been in the place before.

But Harry Sanderson now was not the man who had fallen into oblivion in the motor car. The rector of St. James' was in a strange eclipse. Mentally and externally he had reverted to the old Satan Sanderson of the brilliant flashing originality, of the curt risk and daring. The deeply human and sensitive side that had developed during his divinity years was in abeyance. It showed itself only in the affection he bestowed on the little amiable dog that followed him like a brown, shaggy shadow.

He was like that old self of his, and yet if he had but known it he was wonderfully like some one else, too—some one who had belonged to the long ago and garbled past that still eluded him; some one who had been a part also of the life of this very town till a little over a month before, when he had left it with dread dogging his footsteps!

Curious coincidences had wrought together for this likeness. In the past weeks Harry had grown perceptibly thinner. A spare beard was now on his chin, and the fiery sun that had darkened his cheeks to sallow had lightened his brown hair a shade. The cut on his brow had healed to the scabulae of a tidiest birthmark.

Patro—God—was doing strange things for Harry Sanderson!

In the normal weeks of wind and sun, as the thunders of the brain grew slowly back to a state of normal action, the mind seized again and again upon the bitter question of his identity. It had intruded into clicking leagues on steel rails, into miles afoot by fruit hung lines, on while Pacific shell roads under cedar branches, on busy highways. It had stalked into days of labor in hop fields, work with hand and foot that brought dreamless sleep and generous wages into nights of less savory experience in city alleys, where a half-forgotten man gamed and drank recklessly, audaciously, forbiddingly. Who was he? From what equation of life had he been eliminated? Had he loved anything or anybody? Had he a friend, any friend, in the world?

The man of no memories gave no heed to the men on the street, who looked at him askance. He stumbled along unconsciously, his hands thrust deep in his pockets. With a casual glance at the hotel across the way he entered a saloon, where a score of patrons were standing at the bar or slinking sleekly, nobly at the tables ranged against the wall. The bartender nodded to his greeting, the slightest possible nod. The dog which had followed him into the place leaped up against him, its fore paws on his knee.

"Brandly, if you please," said the new arrival, and paused indolently from the bottle set before him.

The conversation in the room had chilled. To its occupants the man who had entered was no stranger. He was Hugh Stiles, returned, unwelcome to a place from which he had lately vanished. Moreover, what they felt for him was not alone the crude hatred which the honest toiler feels for the trickster who gains a living by devious knavery. There was no lighter epithet than that of Hugh Stiles! A blue-shirited milner called gruffly for his score, threw down the silver and went out, slamming the swinging door.

When Your Stomach Hurts Take A Little Kodol

The pain will then cease, the irritation end, and your stomach will feel good. Kodol stops the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia quickly. Because it digests all the food you eat.

Kodol is a pleasant, palatable liquid preparation that helps the stomach do its work in a natural way and is the only preparation that completely digests all the food you eat. Being a liquid, it starts digestion at once.

Kodol supplies the same digestive juices that are found in healthy stomach. This is why it will stop the pains of indigestion quickly. This is why it prevents chronic nervous dyspepsia.

Your stomach being weakened probably by over-feeding or over-work, is unable to do its work properly, and the natural result is—indigestion, sour stomach, gas or belching, which will soon result in chronic dyspepsia, unless the stomach is given help.

That shaly, painful feeling in the stomach is nervous indigestion or dyspepsia. It is not only annoying, but dangerous. If left alone, the result is generally gastritis, or often that fatal affliction—appendicitis. Appendicitis according to the best medical authorities is directly caused by indigestion.

Don't neglect your stomach. Don't take any chances. There is no need for you to suffer, because a little Kodol now and then will keep the stomach well, healthy and strong. Do not diet or starve yourself. That is not the way to get help. Your body needs the food your appetite calls for—you must have plenty of good food to make bone, muscle and rich life-giving blood.

is the opinion of these writers.

Browning wrote: "Let a man contend to uttermost for his life's set prize be it what it will." If your life's "set prize" is a successful business, you will not have contended for it "to the uttermost," nor even moderately, unless you have used publicity "to the uttermost."

Bishop Earle wrote: "There are four great ciphers in the world: he that is lame among dancers; dumb among lawyers, dull among scholars and rude among courtiers." In these days the Bishop would add a FIFTH CIPHER to his list—the advertiser who is afraid to "risk" using as much space as his nobigger competitor uses.

"The great ship has also great dangers" and so has the great store. The tendency to UNDERADVERTISE one of them.

"Iteration, like fiction, is likely to generate heat instead of progress." Even an interesting store advertisement should not be reprinted, without change, too often.

"Life is not dated merely by years. Events are sometimes the best calenders." Store growth, chronologically related, would be a list of "advertising events," or "publicity red-letter days." Sometimes these cover long years sometimes they are condensed into months.

"Well, I do think New York should have been named Washington," said a visitor. "Every time I look out of a high window I see nothing but lines upon lines of washings hung between brick walls or on roofs. In fact, I think of New York, as seen from the skyscrapers, as consisting of windows and washings, isn't it so?"

Woman—the Power.

Any publisher will tell you that it is the approval of the women of the country which makes the "big sellers;" that to be a paying business investment the magazine must cater to the women. It is the women of the country who read. The men read the newspapers and the articles in the magazines which their wives recommend to them.—Appleton's.
